ABUSE OF POWER

BY THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

The True Inside History of the Acts of That Department Buring the Late Star-Route Trial Related by a Man Who Knows What he is Talking Aliont Relations of the Parties

The Washington correspondent of the New York Traff tells the following interesting and truthful tells of the inner workings of our seculed Department of Justice. As it has never teen tell before, we remodere it entire.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The more closely the public scruthing and dissert his streament in public scruthing and dissert his streament in the continuous properties of flagges of resigning the partition of Justice for having corruptly approached process in the Starting 1913, the greater the consisting its truth. As a consequence, the Attenney Countrianal corruptly approached proves in the Saks hours first, the greater the conviction of its train, as a consequence, the Attorney-Canaria and the special commed are put to their wirs' ends in the endeavor to explain away the disagreeable and reprobensible facts. The recent let of Attorney-Canaria for the refer of Attorney-Canaria for the Attorney-Canaria for the processed, is locked upon with deriston and characterized as an unrecable afternought. The proposition to give or premise offices to the jurious as reward or inducement for them to vact for conviction or "hear" the jury was made pending the trial, but the Indignation or resentance of the Attorney-General, singularity, did not have its birth until after the disclosures were made by Calanti Ingerselt. Then the Department of Justice is selzed with a sudden and alarming grasm of virtue and neather and alarming grasm of virtue and neather and anathematized, and cast out as a moral loper by the very men who employed him originally to do this dirty work.

Fall's Appointment. not employed by the Department of Justice (not at a bonder enlary as is now alleged, but at a per Junn #150 at 43), he was required to reject to Mr. #150 br. the principal detective under Brewster Cameron, and did so report, Subsequently Mr. Fall was taken from Taylor's control and ordered to report directly to the Department. This was resented by Besettive Taylor, who regarded it, and so complained to Brewster Cameron, as an expression of want of confidence in idm (Taylor). Thereupon Mr. Cameron thought Taylor a little two sensitive, explaining that Fall was a lawyer, thoroughly votsed in the tricks of the trade, and, in the matter of reaching the Jury would be able not only to protect himself, but the Bepartment. Taylor had no right to suspect he had been overshoushed, but, on the contrary, he was protected from possible harm.

The matter stood exactly in this condition when Fall was of swaling to reach the colored forces. Martin and Brown, and when Taylor learned that Fall was negotiating with these jurors through third parties he sounded the alarm at the Department of Justice, Insisting that Fall's action would result in "glving away" the whole transaction. Irevestor Cameron, as well as the special counsel to whom he facts were disclosed, agreed in opinion that Fall we not transaction. Irevestor Cameron, as well as the special counsel to whom he facts were disclosed, agreed in opinion that Fall was the special counsel to whom the facts were disclosed, agreed in opinion that Fall was the special counsel to whom the facts were disclosed, agreed in opinion that Fall was the special counsel to whom to rights" to use for conviction or to "hang" the jury.

It further appears that the sum of $100 was put up" to reach Brown in the "banko" case, but by one of those mysterious transactions which reverse the adage of "honor among thever," it was lost in transitu, and nover came to Brown's hands, nor could any proof be adduced that Brown had ever agreed to receive this money. Failing therefore to fasten a charge of bribery upon Brown, the project of "breaking" the jury was abandoned and the scheme of "hanging" the jury adopted as the safer and wiser plan, in default of prospect of conviction.

Bliss' Game.

as the safer and wiser plan, in default of pros-pect of conviction.

Bitss' Game.

It may be asked why it was that the Depart-ment of Justice and its army of employes be-came alarmed and were thus stampeded. The explanation is reasonable and easy, The prose-cution had a legion of detectives, spotters and what-nots employed to watch the defendants, their counsel and the jurous—the latter having been allowed to separate each day under cau-tion of the Court net to talk of the trial, nor to allow anybody to talk to them. The defend-ants naturally employed their pickets and sentrice, and between the two hattallons of secret emissaries there ensued a continuous rame of detective chess. To those who have had experience in the methods of Mr. George bliss it is not necessary to explain that his lission were well drilled and thoroughly disci-plined, and, morover, being in Government pay, well worked and doubtless well re-warded.

The prosecuting officers became somewhat pay, well worked and doubtless well rewarded.

The prosecuting officers became somewhat alarmed at the fact that Foreman Dickson took copious notes and asked a great many pointed questions during the trial, and, as Mr. Dickson had been regarded as unfriendly, politically, to Dorsey and Brady, they had builded largely on his being on the side of the Government, again, they thought that the employment of Mr. Merrick as special counsel would naturally control Dickson, for the reason that Merrick and Dickson had maintained the closest political and personal relations for eight or ten years past, and together ran the Thiden and Hanceck campaigns in the Federal City. But when they came to speculate on events, and doubtless on reports made by their detectives, they concluded that Dickson could not be "invoiced" beyond all peradventure as their property.

Harking Back.

In the meantime, Judge Wylle had made repeated dectatons favorable to the defense, more especially to Donsey, and when the Oregon routes were under examination Judge Wylle ruled against the evidence presented by the prosecution as untenable and ridiculous. This created great anxiety on the part of the prosecution, but when the detectives reported that the probable cause for Judge Wylle's supposed leading toward the defense was the fact that Mr. Justice Miller of the Supreme Court of the United States was nightly a vision at Judge Wylle's house, then constornation sedged the Department of Justice To explain this it is necessary to go a little further into the remote history of the case. Colonel decorge B. Corkhill. United States Autories for the District of councils, is the sonial-law of Justice Miller. He was appointed by Freedent Hayes mainly upon the sciletianton of Justice Miller of the States Autories "clastice Miller and the States of the States of the Case of the Case

Rowen Appears.

Corabili, he was simply put under the ban by Meevengh.

Rowen Appears.

When Mr. Brewster became Altorney-Gencral, Corabili's official position was similarly ignored, and Messrs, Bliss, Merrick and Kortestand as special counsel, vice Cook and Olison, who were sent ignominiously to the rear, instead of removing Corabili and appointing an acceptable successor, Attorney-denoral Meevengh said down upon him, and attorney-General Brewster, Hading Corabili's massed carcuss among the assets of his predecessor, proceeded to again sit down upon it quite as web-meantly, in which pastine he was assisted by Bliss, Merrick and Ker, notwithstanding the fact that Corkhill had managed the Guittean trial with considerable, it not commendable, skill.

It was a matter of notoricy that Justice Miller did not approve the manner in which his son-in-law had been treated by the Department of Justice, and therefore when it was revenied that he had been nightly sitting up with his neighbor, Judge Wylle, possibly playing a social game of cuchre or brewing cool drinks to refresh themselves in the torrich heat of summer, the alarm was sounded that Wylle had been captured by the defense, When this was considered in connection with Judge Wylles favorable decisions it went almost without saying that the case was lost to the presention.

Beads of perspiration shood upon the noble brow of the Attorney-General. George Bliss bit his nails with Increased avidity. Browster Cameron became affected with insomnia, and Ker ordered a new ear-trumpet. The only one who did not lone his head was Lawyer Merrick, who is usually cool in a pressing emericancy. The detectives were nonplussed, and the result of several councils of war was the determination that something should be done to break or "hang' the jury. The valuable services of Lawyer Fall were at once, a stated by Colonel Ingersoll, utilized in the direction, and the new and here no public and the secure.

Bowen had been hanging upon the vorge, so

Ingersoll's Strategy.

The Attorney-General now repudiates both Dowen and Fall, and would repudiate Browster Cameron it is were not for their peculiar relations. Driven into a corner by Colonel ingersoil's statement, the ridiculous and atomicated plee is put forward that Bowen, Fall, Tayler and their outfit were "rung in" on Brewster Cameron, the special counsel and the attorney-General, through the shrewl devices of the Star-Routs defondants and their lawyers. The actual Google Bliss and the special formation of the Star-Routs defined and their lawyers. tion now pur forward by Attorney-General Brewster's authority, and the public are solicited to believe the story.

The Bepartment of Justice and its employed as the preparing a statement to vindicate this ridiculous hypothesis. Among other things, it will be charged that Chief Detective Taylor was convicted of a felony some years since, and sentenced to the pentientiary, and therefore totally unworthy of credit. It appears that Taylor was so convicted, but, after serving a few months of his sentence, his innocence was alsoevered, shid he was pardoned by President Grant upon recommendation of the Attorney-General. This fact and all the attendant circumstances were known at the Department of Justice when Taylor was first employed there, and he was in the service when Attorney-General Brewster was appointed, and Brewster Cameron made Chief Special Agent in place of Special Agent Newcomb.

Taylor's offense seems to have been that he distrusted Fall's offorts to reach the jurors and advised against their continuance, to which Mr. Cameron paid no head. Taylor was first of the consequences likely to follow a discovery of the attempt to corrupt the jurors, which he thought was imminent in view of fall's indiscretion and the fact that Fall had been taken from his control and allowed to report independently. It is said that Colonel ingersoil is supplied with further and more convincing proof and fully fortified against all efforts of the Department of Justice to whistie this matter down the wind. Your correspondent asked Colonel Ingerwil whether he intended to make further revealations, to which the following characteristic reply was given:

"I did not set out on a fool's errand in this affair and feel confident of results. A good general does not exhaust his ammunition on the first fire. When the enemy trains his guns and returns the fire, than look out for another round, which will silence his batteries."

Brewster and Corkhill.

Brewster and Corkhill.

Brewster and Corkhill.

Special to Truth.

Washi Norros, Oct. 24.—It has been accertained positively that the reason why Attornoy-General Brewster took away the Investigation of the attempts to bribe the Star-Route party from District Attorney Corkhill and placed it under the control of the Department of Justice was because Corkhill, upon consideration of the affidavits of Dickson, Brown, Foote and others, announced his intention to cause the arrest of Brewster Cameron, Bowen and Fall. It also supervenes that the report of Special Gounsel Wells, employed to investigate the jury bribery matter, is withhold because of its absurdity, the entire tenor being to show that Dickson endeavored to blackmail Bowen. This is repudiated by the Attorney-General and Special Counsel Ker and Merrick. The rumer is prevalent that the President has pointedly disapproved the methods of the Department of Justice in this matter.
